4th October 2007, London: Premier Pensions Services (PPS) believes that the growth of Self Invested Personal Pensions (SIPPs) is assured for the foreseeable future . With this in mind the company has launched a SIPP survey to IFAs in order to ensure that PPS continue to understand what the IFA wants in this dynamic market.

Nigel Manley, Head of Self-Invested Pensions, PPS says, "We are keen to deliver what the IFA and their client wants rather than what we assume is wanted. We believe that we have the flexibility and strength to deliver this type of proposition, rather than dictating to IFAs what their clients must do. Part of this process involves talking to IFAs, and actively taking their opinions into consideration."

The survey can be reached through the link below and only takes 10 minutes to complete and there will be a case of wine for the respondent successful in a prize draw. The survey closes on the 12th October with some of the aggregated results being released to the industry later in the year.

The survey can be found at - www.jltsurveys.com/PPS_survey
